Enough room to carry any business

The Volkswagen Kombi drove a cultural revolution in the 60s. Today that flower powered icon is reborn in the ID.Buzz, a vehicle so harmoniously designed inside and out that can be inhabited by 120,000 bees' pollinating their way through Aotearoa.

Introducing the Volkswagen Pollination Tour

We're on a mission with 120,000 bees on board the ID.Buzz to follow the honey flow of flowers. Why? Because at the centre of our ecosystem is pollination from dairy and fruit to renewed native bush and forestry. As land is repurposed these tireless pollinators need a little help getting from A to bee.

It's flower power reimagined for an entirely new generation.

Where will you take your ideas

A cargo-optimised van created around a fully electric platform makes for entirely new possibilities. 'Polly' started as a factory fresh VW ID. Buzz Cargo. A team of beekeepers and fabricators used the 3.9m³ space to house not just hives but a fully climate-controlled 'beecosystem'.

If this worked in an ID.Buzz, imagine what could work for your business?

Follow the tour

The honey flow is a time when nectar is most abundant, attracting bees in large quantities. Beginning in the warmer north, it flows south in a wave of blossoming flowers.
